

The Onboarding Build

client-onboarding · built in airtable

The first 48 hours set the tone for the whole engagement, and they're usually improvised.

What it connects to: Won in the CRM has to become tasks in the project tool, a folder somewhere, and an intake the client actually returns. Three systems, one moment.

1 of 4 SYSTEM

Here's what fires the moment a deal flips to Won — welcome, checklist, intake, escalation.

2 of 4 THINKING

It escalates if the intake hasn't come back by day two, rather than waiting for someone to notice.

The screenshot displays a workflow editor with a central configuration panel and two side panels labeled 'INPUT' and 'OUTPUT'.

Central Panel:

- Title: Did the intake come back inside two days?
- Parameters: Selected tab.
- Settings: Tab with an 'Execute step' button.
- Conditions:
 - Expression: `{{ $json.intakeReturned === true && $json.n.dayCount <= 2 }}`
 - Dropdown: is true
 - + Add condition
 - Convert types where required (toggle)
 - Options: + Add option
- Footer: ? I wish this node would...

INPUT Panel:

- Icon: →|
- Text: No input data
- Button: Execute previous nodes
- Text: to view input data

OUTPUT Panel:

- Icon: |→
- Text: No output data
- Button: Execute step
- Text: to view output data

Bottom Bar: Logs

3 of 4 THEIR-WORLD

Running in the CRM, triggered on the status change rather than a stage drag.

The screenshot displays the Airtable CRM interface for a sample CRM to Ops Bridge. The main view shows a table of deals with columns for Deal Name and External ID. A modal window is open for the 'Northwind Trading' deal, showing various fields and a 'Delivery Projects' section. The 'Delivery Projects' section contains a table of linked deals and a 'Start a conversation' button.
